Subject EPA to Assess Threat to Delaware Watershed Drinking Water

Message Body

Dear Lisa Jackson,

Please tell me the EPA is going to also have a forum to assess the risks to drinking water in the Susquehanna Watershed as they are for the Delaware in light of the recent shocking revelations in the New York Times series about gas drilling in PA? We in the Susquehanna do not and never had the moratorium for drilling the Delaware has now. The SRBC(Susquehanna River Basin Commission) is NOT involved in drill permitting as they do not have functional jurisdiction over water quality as does the DRBC(Delaware River Basin Commission). Please do not tell me the poorer Susquehanna Watershed will once again be forsaken but by the EPA this time? The articles in the Times were written on the backs of those living in active drilling areas in PA, we are the ones experiencing degraded water, air, environment, roads etc. Please do not tell me we are to sacrificed once again to save those residents in the Delaware Watershed where there is no active shale gas extraction? What is the EPA going to do about us? Please see the attached billboard to run in our county of Susquehanna. It is truly "us" partnering with the EPA; please do not let us down. You are our only regulatory hope.

Sincerely,

Rebecca Roter
